A Message from the Editor . . . .

to the students of Mid-Prairie

This is your first Mid-Prairie HAWK. With its pages are your memories of the 1960-61 school year. Memories of...

that long-remembered football game ....the dances, parties, and proms....

those never-forgotten plays....and those ever-crowded hallways between classes!

I hope you enjoy your '61 HAWK and will continue to do so in years to come.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Ellen Miller

Editor

Dedication

We the annual staff of 1961 wish to dedicate this first yearbook of Mid-Prairie High School to the Mid-Prairie supporters for their constant effort to make such a school possible for the present and future students of this area.

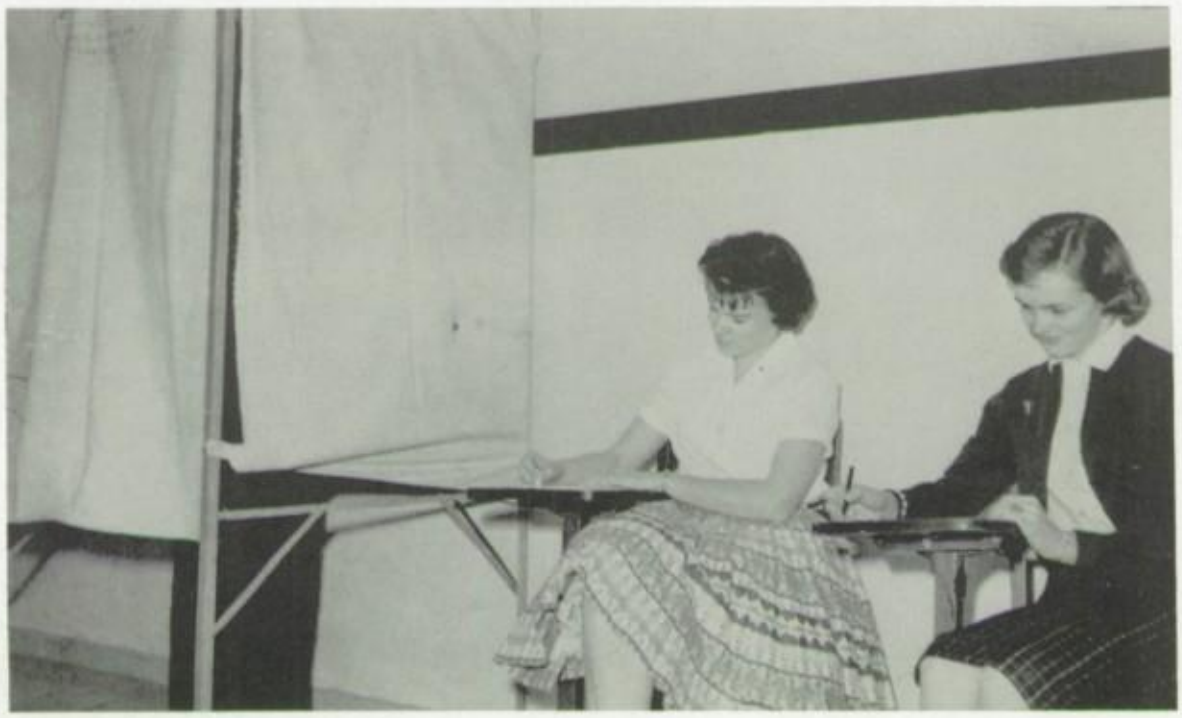
Nixon Wins Mock School Election



"Voting is a right and a duty, but It's more than that, It's an opportunity." The students of Mid-Prairie exercised this right when they voted on November 3rd in a mock Presidential election. The seniors in the Seminar in American Government class brought a city election booth and set it in the hall of the school. The students used this booth during the day to practice voting in a Presidential election. The results of the election are as follows:

President	Nixon	114	Kennedy	60
Senator	Miller	107	Loveless	65
Governor	Erbe	113	McManus	57
Representative	Schwengel	119	Guenther	50

Eighty-eight per cent of the students voted which shows that students are interested in the affairs of the country.

Students Celebrate Holiday Season at Prom

huge Christmas tree was the center
of attention and
the decorations at the Christmas Prom. The dance was an all school affair
and each class took part in arranging it. The music was provided by the "Aristrocrats" and the first formal dance of the year proved to be a lot of fun for everyone who attended.

Sweethearts Swirl

A "Sweetheart Swirl" Valentine dance was sponsored by the Future Homemakers of America in February. Colorful red and white streamers enclosed the dancing area and gay paper hearts dangled freely overhead. Refreshments were served from a table that carried out the Valentine theme. A "guess-the-number-of-hearts" game and a door prize were special features of the real swirlin' affair.

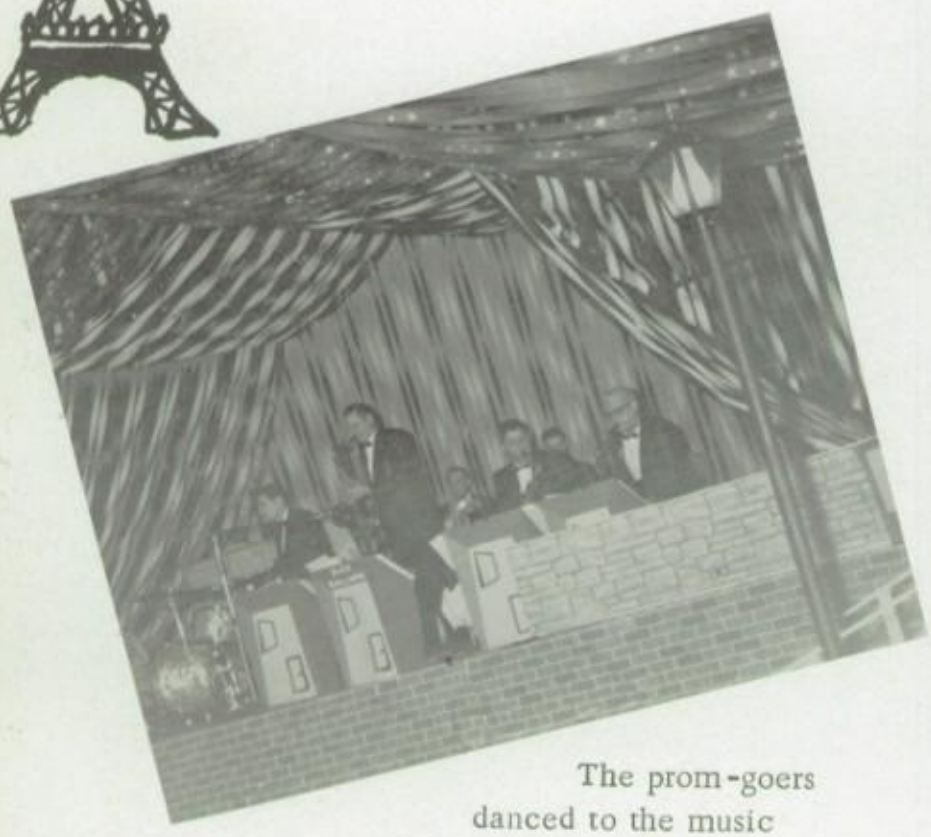
"Une Soirée de Paris"



The prom-goers danced to the music of Richard Ballad's Orchestra.

The junior class of Mid-Prairie presented the seniors with their annual Junior-Senior Prom. This year's theme was "Une Soiree de Paris" which literally means a formal evening party in Paris. The gym was decorated to represent a sidewalk cafe in Paris. A red and white canopy was suspended along two sides. This sheltered the tables which had red and white checked tablecloths and boasted miniature Eiffel towers as centerpieces. The dancing area was bounded by stone hedges. A flower cart here and there enhanced the French theme. Overhead was a blue star clustered shy. The entrance to this miniature Paris was a small, French style footbridge over a rippling stream.

'61 Jr.-Sr. Prom Theme

After crossing a small foot bridge
they entered the midnight magic
of gay Paris.

As each couple crossed the bridge they were handed a program and their favors. The girls received a china Eiffel tower and the boys were given a piece of French money.

Twelve sophomore boys and girls served at the prom. The girls dressed in black leotards, short black skirts with red lining and white shirts, black bow ties, and black slacks. During the evening they came around to the tables, took their orders, and brought there the refreshments which were cream puffs, punch, and petite fours. At intermission they presented a program. All the girls danced and sang to "Oh! Frenchy!" and Billy Miller and Gary Swain did a pantomime. Then Bob Swartzendruber pantomimed a Maurice Chevalier song.

BAND SPRING CONCERT HELD

The Mid-Prairie band presented their Spring Concert on March 28 at 8:00 P.M. It was in the Wellman gym and was free of charge.

A few of the numbers presented by the band were "Lohengrin," "Panis Angelicus," "My Fair Lady," and "Theme from Exodus." There were some fast moving marches such as "Burst of Flame" and "On the Street" A special number entitled "Trombroro" featured a trombone trio consisting of Shirley Niffenegger, Helen Birkey, and Nancy Statler.

The ninth grade students from the three schools participated in this concert. They practiced the same songs as the high school and then met for night practices to add the finishing touches.

SCIENCE FAIR TOMORROW NIGHT

The annual Mid-Prairie High School Science Fair will be tomorrow evening, March 31, in the gym located at Wellman.

On Tuesday evening, March 20, the Science Club held their regular meeting. Roll call was answered by 26 members.

Plans for the Science Fair were discussed. It was decided to have a program for the Science Fair with Jin Slockett as chairman. Various experiments which could be used for the program were then suggested.

Various committees were set up in relation to the Science Fair. They are as follows: poster--Wendy Phillips, chairman; Nancy Lewis and Susan Schwartz; tables--Lee Swain, chairman, Larry Hohensholl and Bob Parcell; clean-up--Phil Miller, chairman, Terry TeBockhorst, Mickey Godlove and Richard Weaver.

QUILL AND SCROLL INITIATION TONIGHT

Knowledge

The Mind Full of Knowledge Has a Need for Guidance

When a student gathers the available knowledge, or has access to it, he must also decide how and where to cultivate this wealth during the remainder of his life. Another program, Guidance, is offered for the purpose of helping the student make some of these decisions.

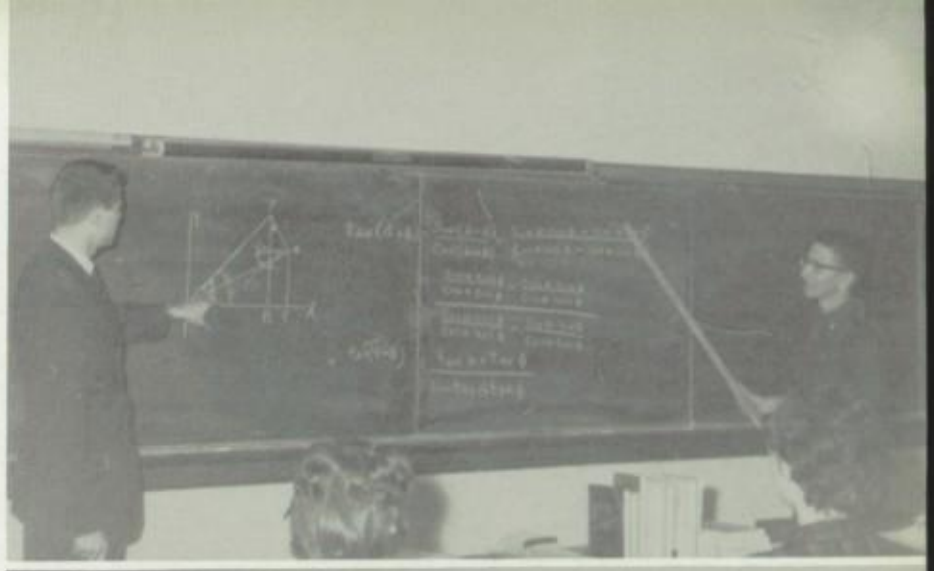
A college application, scholarship tests, these and many more, are at the hands of the pupil. A high school student with his store of knowledge can seek the closely related guidance offered to him, receiving the information that will guide him to the offices, stores, colleges and universities of the land or even to other corners of the world.

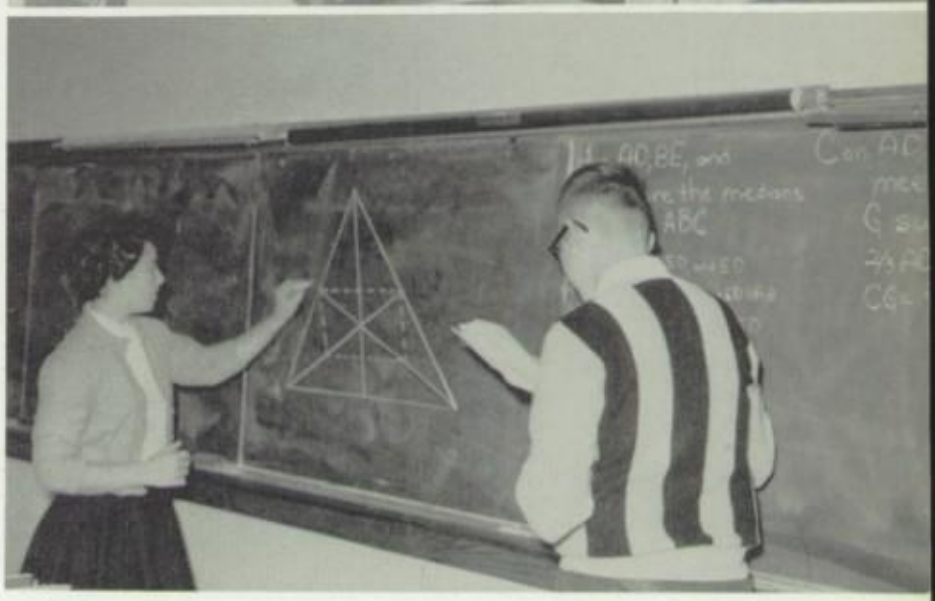
From This Hall Come the Efforts of Concentrated Minds

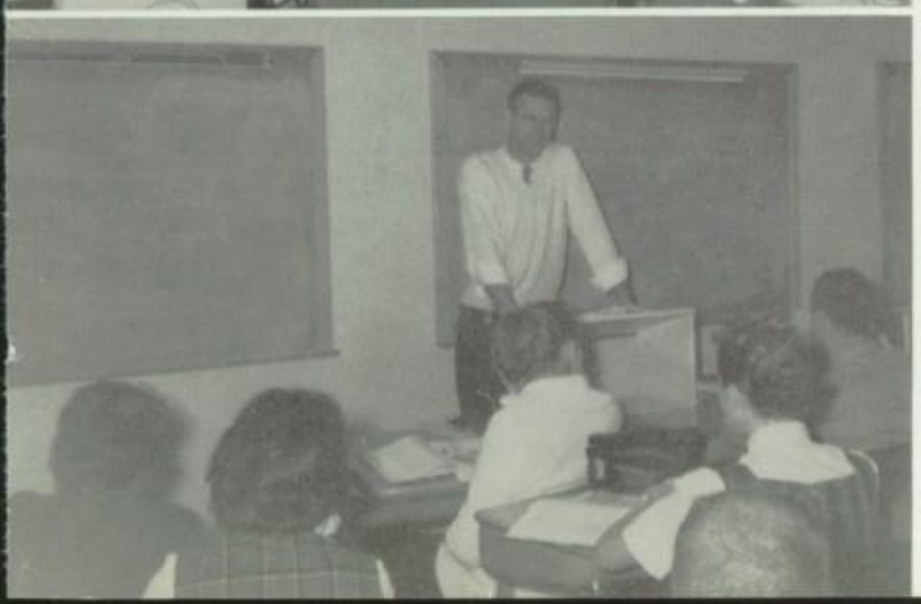
Intermitent with each day's schedule of classes are one or two study hall periods for each pupil, depending on whether the subjects he takes number five or four. A good sharp pencil is a must for proper study, so, of course, a pencil sharpener is provided. Another essential is a desk, and each student is assigned one. Class assignments call for text book use, so a student enters the study hall with a book or two or more. A library provides reference books when needed and offers magazines and other books for those who seek leisure or pleasure along with study. And from this hall could come the immortal works of some poet-unaware bound to fame; probably some of the world's greatest and youngest thoughts go unspoken here as they come to mind while a high schooler thinks or writes or reads--and then are gone again in the quietness of study hall.

Hidden Treasure Is Found Among Pages of Math Books

Material for thought, a science within itself, the mathematics courses provde the student with an inner understanding of quantity, forward and backward, and an ability to think things out that are not visible in the external plainness of lead pencil figures on white notebook paper or chalk geometry drawings on a black board. Plane geometry, advanced algebra, and trigonometry give the student a continuous quest for hidden treasure as the geometry theorm is proved, the algebra equation is solved, or the trigonometry problem is answered.







Social Studies Strengthen Views of Self and World

Knowledge includes not only the learning of new things, but also learning about the past. Through the social studies program a Mid-Prairie student learns about the peoples of the world, the makers of our nation, and the structure of our government.

Subjects are World History, United States History, and American Government. A seminar in American Government was inaugurated into the Mid-Prairie curriculum in 1960. Class discussion in the areas of government, economics, sociology, history of our country and earth give the student a better understanding of self, nation, and world. Information and study concerning the present, and stimuli for the future are not complete if they are not balanced with some knowledge of how our world became what it is today.

Knowledge of the Science World Is Learned in the Class Room

A yearning for discovery, a need for observation, and the desire for experimentation, wonderment of what and why we are, what makes things "tick", and "what of tomorrow?" find a beginning in the science room. Available to the Mid-Prairian in this division are biology, chemistry, and physics.

Biology--the study of living things--presents the student with such things as an insect collection, the dissection of a starfish (Asterias sp) or a study of mutations, the pollination of flowers, or microscopic organisms.

Geared by the science dealing with the composition of materials and the changes in composition which these materials undergo, the young chemist is faced with the terms and laws of matter and energy, elements and compounds, atoms and molecules, symbols and formulas. Water and rubber and aluminum and fluorine do not escape his watchful eye. Laboratory experiments enable him to prepare compounds and to break them down as he observes this composition of matter.

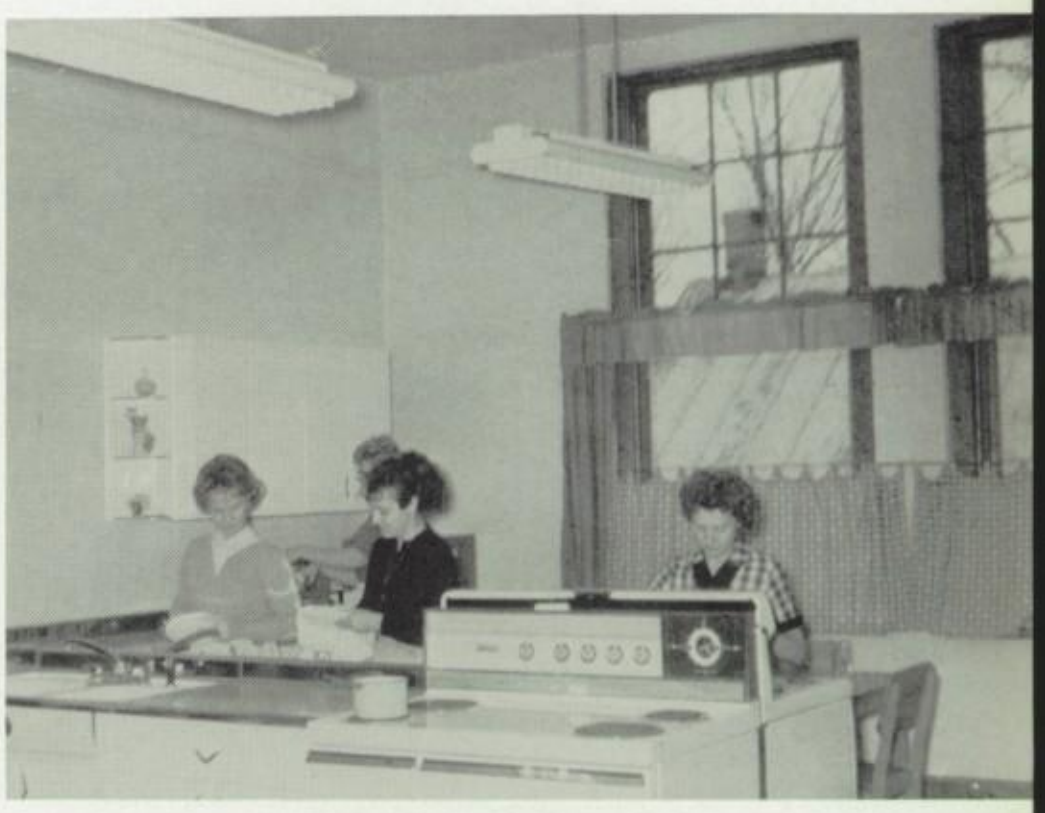
To study changes in materials which do not involve a change in composition is the goal of the physics class. As these students study the metric system and the six simple machines, friction, electronic circuits, magnetism, heat, and light and sound, their minds can ponder the fact that physicists of today rim the world and their discoveries pave the way so that the development of physical scientists of today might make progress in tomorrow's age.

All Students Are Provided A Sound English Background

All students are provided a sound English background. Whether a Mix-Prairie High School student prepares for a college education, a commercial career, or general high school education, he must be well versed in his national language. English in grades ten and eleven is therefore required, and the twelfth grade recommended. In the 1960-61 academic year at Mid-Prairie there were two sections of sophomore English, three junior sections, and two courses for the seniors: college preparatory and practical.

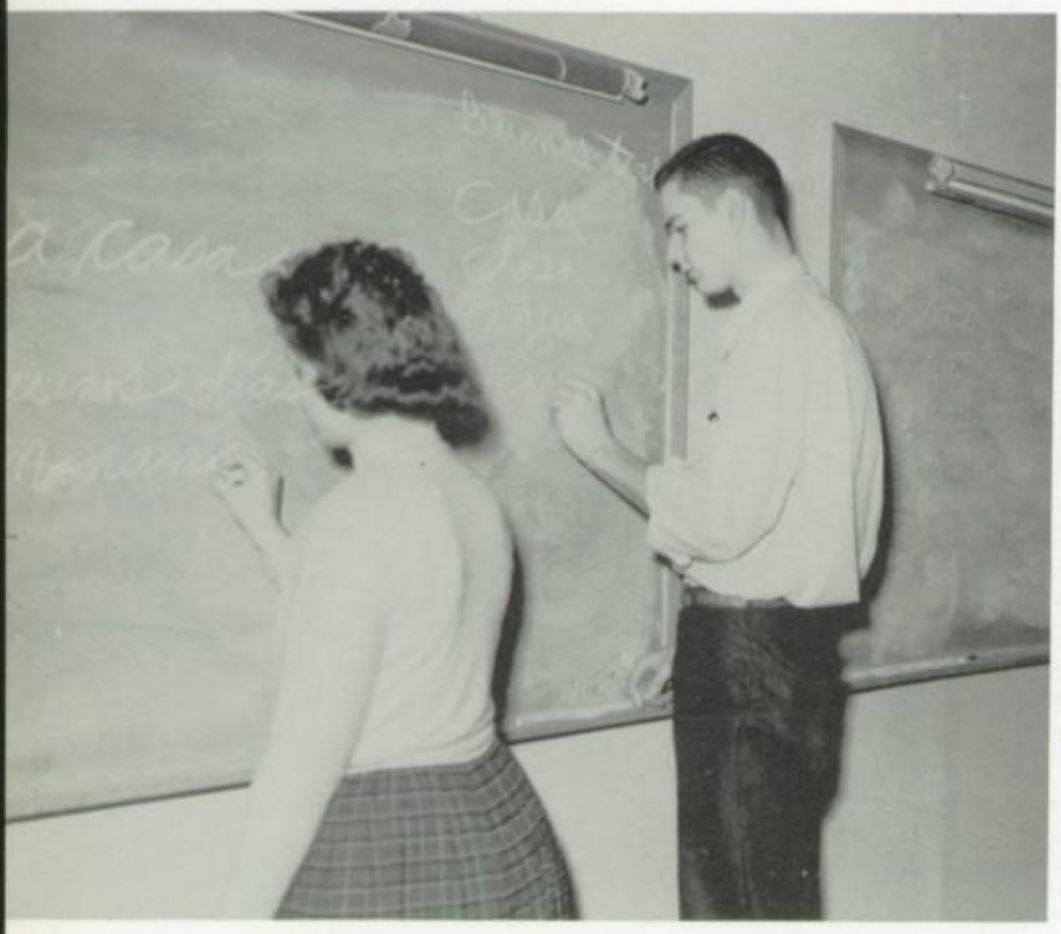
English class studies ranged from correctness in writing through creative writing, with emphasis on speech and literature. Creative writing might have been a short anecedote, or the polished composition of a budding novelist; Speech--a classroom level humorous incident, or a nationally sponsored "I Speak for Democracy"--entry originates through an English course. Literature, whether Paul Bunyan or MacBeth, presents to the student a broad concept, an understanding, through modern text books, of writers of our times and other times.

Girls Go Forth With Ideas Gained in Home Economics



A course in home economics is another area of the Mid-Prairie curriculum. In this area future homemakers gain practical training in careers of the home. Home furnishings are studied, color schemes and floor plans are worked out. Budgets are discussed in this situation and others, costume design, and foods and nutrition. The girls plan their wardrobes, sew many of their clothes, prepare baked products and meals. Ideas gained here will be initiated into the homes of tomorrow, and the fact that homes will be numerous is a certainty.

A Foreign Language Widens One's Knowledge of the World



For the student wishing to speak and study a language other than his own, courses in French and Spanish hold a store of knowledge for him. From the "Parlez-vous francais?" of Paris centered minds to the "dHabla Vd. espannol?" of Old Mexico, the enchantment of the language arts of other lands are brought into the halls of Mid-Prairie. Students converse in the language of their choice and write French and Spanish compositions. A song, a game, can be fun in Spanish or French as well as English. As other lands are drawn closer to ours through changing times, it becomes more and more essential that a student can go forth in the world able to understand a foreign language.

Training in Business Methods Starts in the High School

The fact that business is a mighty important thing in the world today and that it will inevitably soar to greater heights with each passing day calls for a sound commercial course in Mid-Prairie High School. Today's youth trained in the fields of typing, shorthand, bookkeeping, and office practice will form the bulk of those who are to operate the stores, banks, and offices in the days ahead.

A high school student enrolls in a typing course and soon finds that learning the position of letters and numerals on the keyboard and the parts of the machine not only leads to a faster and neater typing skill but also to better prepared written work for his other classes. He learns the correct way to write a business letter. Perhaps he will someday become a secretary.

As skyscraper office buildings get higher, as people find more to converse and write about, greater is the demand for secretaries and stenographers. Shorthand and bookkeeping help the prospective business man or woman gain a broader clerical background.

And office practice itself gives the student a chance to practice with the machines of the business world, keep files, and carry out model business transactions. Knowledge gathered in the commercial room leads to a possible commercial education and an occupation as a business leader of tomorrow on these shores and others.

A Future in Farming Starts With a Study of Agriculture

Situated, as it is, on the prairie itself, Mid-Prairie offers to its future farmers in vocational agriculture a true picture of fertile soil, a broad view of clear horizons, really known and loved by only the food producers of America. Here, through a broad training program in the school itself, the agriculturists of tomorrow study all aspects of the soil, crops, livestock, and machinery. Their own experience in raising a field of corn--from the first tilling of the land through a crib of golden grain--molds in the future farmer a feeling of satisfaction that he has conquered, produced, and harvested from the ground on which he stands.

Beauty of Expression Is Captured Industrially

Industrial Arts--take a boy and a piece of wood, a shop with machinery, perhaps some plans, and a taste of ingenuity--here students are trained in the field of wood working. A scraggly pine, blown bare on some far hillside, may yet have the interior that builds a beautiful, glossy table or chest. Drafting is done, measurements are taken, holes are drilled, and plans are drawn. The beauty of art is captured here, industrially.

The Golden Hawks were a brand new team in the fall of 1960. The fact that it was their first season didn't keep the Mid-Prairie eleven from compiling a 7-1 record. In short, there was hardly a thing greater than the football team.
